Promise And Performance

CARMI A. THOMPSON, the Republican nominee for governor, has made one definite promise. It is when he takes office his policy will be to reduce expenses, obtain for every dollar of state money expended an equivalent in supplies or services, and lighten the burden of the taxpayers.

It has been characteristic of Mr. Thompson during a long and useful public career to make pledges sparingly, but his record shows he has been able to make them good. They are not the profuse promises of a professional politician, to be forgotten the day after election.

Ohio law confers upon the governor authority to veto all appropriation bills passed by the legislature. Or, at his discretion, the governor may approve the bills and veto only such items of proposed expenditures that may seem unnecessary and extravagant. It is possible, of course, but not at all probable, that a governor's veto might be overridden. Legislators beeking reelection or continued popularity at home; would think at least twice before taking such action to increase tax burdens which a governor had attempted to lighten.

When Mr. Thompson was speaker of the Ohio house of representatives a number of years ago, one of his first acts was to insist that half the idle porters and doorkeepers be discharged, notwithstanding a howl of protest from politicians of both parties. When Mr. Thompson became secretary of state in Ohio, he insisted that the banks in which he deposited huge sums of money collected by his department must pay interest to the state. And they did, although at that time there was no state depository law requiring it. Some other public officials collected interest on estate deposits also. The difference was that they put the money into their own pockets. Thompson didn't. And when a legislative investigation was made, Thompson had all the vouchers in proof of his fidelity and zeal in the people's interest.

Since that time, Mr. Thompson has performed other public service with distinction and has succeeded in private business. His life record as a coal mine boy, self-supporting university student, lawyer, legislator, soldier, secretary of state, secretary to the president, cabinet officer, member of the arms imitation conference and successful business man, has been one of achievement in a large way.

Voters' Responsibility

THERE are in every campaign, and this one is no exception, people who as election draws near, take the position that as such and such a candidate is certain to be elected, or defeated, and such and such an amendment is going to carry successfully, or be defeated, there is no need for them to vote.

A stranger state of mind than this can hardly be imagined. It is especially strange when it is shown by those who do not desire the result which they anticipate. It would be well for them to try to grasp, and hold, the idea, that elections are determined by votes, and the one defeated is the one who gets the few-

That seems fairly elementary, and yet those whom we have in mind would reduce the number of votes of their favorites, simply because they have in some mysterious way decided that he can not be elected.

Electors have no right to act on any such assumption in the very important business of voting. For it is their duty to make their influence count, and to contribute to the support of the cause in which they believe.

It is the duty of the voter to do everything in his power to make the cause which he espouses win by the largest, or lose by the narrowest possible margin.

In other words, public opinion, as it speaks at the polls, should speak strongly and clearly. No such verdict can be allowed to go by default without greatly impairing its value and weakening its effect.

The nation, state, county or city has a right to demand that every place and power. It is a judgment, enter a school near there. and in the rendering of that judgment been seriously ill of typhoid pneuevery citzen should take a part.

FOODS A CHILD MAY HAVE

THE foods in the following list are those a child may have, though they should not all be served in one meal, and the mother selects the foods most appropriate.

Solid foods are introduced gradually after one year of age in the diet of a normal baby.

The first meal should have as a beginning a dish of cereal, gruel, properly salted and served with milk; a piece of zwieback or crumbs of bread made soft with milk, or an egg occasionally cooked for two minutes and thick ened with bread crumbs. This is the time to form the habit of slow eating and perfect mastication. It is so important that other things should be slighted rather than neglect this, as it means a lifelong habit for health or indigestion with its ills.

Fresh bread, hot breads and rich biscuit should never be given. Always serve bread stale enough to crumble. A good way to serve it is to cut in small squares and brown in the oven. For the child from the twelfth to the eighteenth month, fruits such as orange, pineapple, strained apple sauce, prune juice and mashed pulp is especially good, as they contain valuable mineral salts, vitamines and acids. One ounce of the juice or fruit pulp given one-half hour before or one-half hour after their milk.

Broths.-Mutton, chicken, veal or beef broth, with rice or stale bread crumbs, five ounces; beef juice, three Cereals.-Gruel, or cereal jellies made of oatmeal, barley, farina, rice or wheat, four ounces.

Breads.-Zwieback, dry toast, stale bread and butter, graham cracker. Eggs.-Soft cooked in shell, coddled, or soft poached.

Meats.-Scraped rare beef, one tablespoonful.

Milk.-One to one and one-half quarts in 24 hours. This amount includes all milk used in the cooking and preparation of the foods.

Feedings for child from twelve months to eighteen, are five in 24 hours Cereals are given once a day, always well cooked. Vegetables are necessary for a healthy baby past a year and a half. Potato well baked and served with butter, spinach, asparagus tips carrots and cauliflower well cooked and mashed, one vegetable daily unti two years of age, then green vege tables may be given occasionally with the potato.

Meats are given sparingly at first up to the third year, and should be finely chopped or cut. Desserts should be given sparingly up to ten years, and candy never until two years old, and then but one piece daily, always after

The chicha nuts from South America have some excellent qualities, but it has never been found possible to crack the shells without damaging the meat at the same time. United States government authorities applied liquid air to the problem. They did not freeze solid a piece of rubber and use it as a hammer, as is done in the classic experiment in physics, but they simply immersed the nuts in liquid air for 30 seconds and cracked them easily without damage to the kernels. Now the physicists are trying to find out whether this method can be applied commercially on a large scale. Chicha nuts were used during the war to make charcoal for gas masks and the oil from the kernels is a valuable food

STRENGTH and beauty are the outstanding qualities of the Granby. It is built to endurebuilt to use, and built to please

In the Granby Line will be found many beautiful period models-Shearton, Queen Anne, Louis XVI, Adam, Chippendale. Each has distinctive lines and its construction is marked by a close adherence to the period.

Both Upright and Console Table models are built with all the painstaking care for details that marks the finest furniture. Strength, sturdiness is inbuilt. And the wide range of choice in design enables you to pick the one that will exactly fit and harmonize with your room furnishings.

The reproducing apparatus has been dsigned to give perfect results, to eliminate the disagreeable surface noises so objectionable in the usual make of talking machine.

In short, the Granby embodies every desirable feature and quality and includes some that are unique and distinctive.

GLORIOUS FREEDOM

BY DOROTHY DONAHUE

Of course, Pa conceded, within the protective walls of the woodshed, Ma last night.

Judge Bernon immediately imposed had a few merits. She did darn his stockings and keep his clothes mended the Marysville reformatory. and give him the best of meats, besides keeping the house as spotless and motion for a new trial, which Judge shining as a new aluminum pan under Bernon denied. the direct rays of the sun; but Pa felt justified, nevertheless, in his happiness, because, oh, how Ma Whittaker's tongue could fly.

So it was that Pa closed the house

Pa reached the city in a state of glorified individuality. His funds were stated that eighth ballois had been low, very low-so the only restaurant that could possibly attract him was exceedingly undesirable with its smoke-clouded windows, greasy, wet counters and suspiciously revolving stools. But Pa was hungry, so he forced his way in and sat down a little mournfully, with the odor of corned beef and cabbage prevailing. He was the part of the court. thinking of Ma Whittaker when he ordered flapjacks-and was disappointed. Thin, soggy, burnt-horrible! Pa ting that he was not in the broadbacked chair at home, leaned back! Two dark-faced roaring sailors picked him up, snapped a few pieces of invisible hayseed from his shiny coat and bowed low.

Pa reached the street, greatly surprised and humbled, minus the bravado of early morning.

Pa felt a sudden desire for quiet and calm. Everyone seemed to be rushing past him. In the midst of the excited, jabbering throng he felt strangely alone. The cool gray front of a movie theater, with its welcoming gaudy splotch of posters, attracted. Pa went into the soft darkness and groped his way to a seat near the back, sitting down with a worried little sigh of relief. But his eyes were a little weak, and he couldn't read the sub-titles. Ma Whittaker had read them, gladly, the few times they had

A stout, laughing woman wedged her way into the row in front of him, followed by her husband. Her broad, expansive back obstructed Pa's view to the point of exasperation. He moved uneasily in his chair. The stout lady read the first title in a loud, husky voice. The man with her nodded and stared straight ahead.

An aching flood of genuine homesickness almost overcame Pa. He crept out of the dark little palace into the sunshine and decided at once to go home and sleep rather than brave the terrors of a public and cheap hotel.

Pa found the house empty, hollowsounding, lonely. The deadly absence of Ma's merry but insistent chirping was distracting. He fell asleep reading the Gazette and stroking the cat. He dreamed it was Ma's hand he was patting while she scolded him, furiously, for some little thing-and he awoke smiling, only to frown at sight of the purring little ball of fur.

Outside it was drizzling. It had been drizzling in Pa's heart all day. He pulled on a battered hat and started for the garden. He could almost see her now puttering among those swaying popples and that deluge of color that spread over half an acre. "Pa Whittaker!"

Pa blinked pale eyes and swung around like a well-trained soldier. He must be getting old. His eyes-

"Pa Whittaker-out in this wet garden without your rubbers! I've told you and told you, and just because you think I'm not looking, you sneak out and plow through this wet. You're not a young man, I want you to remember, and if---

Pa followed the voice blankly into the house and fell into a chair. The voice went on.

"And I decided I'd better not stay away more'n a day with you so fergetful, so I trudged right home, and bere you are, as usual, doing something that will be the death of you. I've been looking everywhere for you -everywhere, and-" l'a still stared. Understanding crept slowly, very slowly into his mind. Something inside him kept repeating: "She's here—to stay. She's here—to Fifteen minuters later Ma ran out of breath and stopped to regard the st-lent figure in the chair. "Fer land sakes, Pa, are you dumb? Say something!"

Pa looked up into the sharp eyes that held a glint of kindness.

"Ma, please-please keep right on talking. I was never so happy in my life! Never!

Strange Bear.

The Chemosit, or Nandi bear, a mysterious animal that is said to haunt the deep forests in the most inaccessible parts of the East African highlands, has again been seen, this time by a party of reliable European and native witnesses. It has been seen by various people several times during recent years, but no specimen has been killed or captured. The latest description of the bear tallies accurately with previous reports. LADIES! LOOK YOUNG, notes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray, and looks streaked, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't stay gray! Look young! Eine: prepare the recipe at home or from any drug store a bottle of "Wyeths Sage and Sulphur pound," which is merely the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients. Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully; besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturaland evenly. You moisten a sponge soft brush with it drawing this through the hair ,taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two its natural color is restored and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.

SHY MISS HOLT

By MOLLIE MATHER

^වුදුදුදුදුදුදුදුදු (@, 1922, Western Newspaper Union.)

We are always interested in fall. when the new teachers come to Banburg. Bess and I-Bess is my chumright persons do not have my disci-And I must say that Paul has had a hard time of it with the criticism from it looked hoydenish in a member of a parsonage household. Well, when we dertake much of the responsibility of our minds and morals-Bess and I grinned, then we sighed.

"Not," remarked Bess mildly, "just what one would call pretty." "Decidedly," I contributed.

"Why," pleaded May Sales, "will she wear those mammoth rimmed glasses? why one should shrick them.'

"And her hair," went on Bess, "it's so straight combed back, I really don't see how Miss Holt can open her eyes." "She's plain shy, that's what she is." put in the Sales child. "If you ask me, I'll say she has never been out of her native village-wherever it may When I tried to walk with her after school the other day she seemed not unpleasant-just sort of diffident -and at the teachers' meeting, Dad said, she was afraid to open her

"All the better for us," laughed Bess, as they jumped to their feet, and

Paul came out of his study. "I would not discuss my teacher in that manner, Isobel," he reproved. "I heard all you said. It might be better to extend a kindly hand to a new and per haps lonely little teacher."

This was strange from Paul, who usually mentioned only respect due. "Have you met Miss Holt?" I asked "Yesterday," he replied, "I had a few moments' conversation with her.' Next day the finest looking young man came to Danberg. He was to be at our tennis match in the afternoon. I almost wished for the name of the school that Margaret Holt would not come in that horrid best brown poplin of her's. But she did and sat far back under a tree. She kept her eyes, rudely, I thought, on her book when Paul went kindly over to talk to her. The stranger, who turned out to be an important lawyer from the city, forunately did not see our teacher at all. In the evening, Miss Carruth came down the bridle path on her pony, "Nick," and Miss Holt enthused so over him that Miss Carruth was tickled, and asked Miss Holt if she could ride. We giggled at the thought of our teacher up on Nick's back, in her long prim poplin-but in a jiffy she was there and off down the road there were only Miss Carruth, the stranger, and Bess and myself waiting. Will you look at Margaret Holt!" cried Bess-and I looked. Mercy! She was different.

"That was like old times," she began, then stopped as if frozen at sight of the lawyer.

He went forward to assist her to alight. Then with a bow he took Miss Holt's arm, and went walking off at her side. Miss Carruth rode home.

"What does it mean?" I asked Bess. The shy Miss Holt looks like one who has lost her disguise, while the stranger and she seem well acquainted."

I was still more mystified when Bess had gone, and I sat meditating near the hedge. Supper had not been called and I was waiting. Miss Holt and the stranger seated themselves on the opposite side of the hedge, and I am honest in saying that I did not mean to

"And you thought you could hide here behind a pair of spectacles?" the man asked.

"I did not try to hide," our teacher's coice replied. "I only desired to beforever more-a plain nobody; I only wanted-peace." "And you have found it?" the man's tone was sharp. I was surprised at the pain in Margaret Holt's voice.

"Can a murderess know peace?" she asked him

"A murderess! You take things too tragically. Was it your fault that a ove-mad boy killed himself because you refused to marry him?"

"I could hear her stifled sobbing. "Oh, the pity of it," she murmured. "And I determined that I would never again cause innocent suffering. I withdrew into myself-I was dull-ugly." But, nevertheless, love came again, the man spoke brusquely. "Is it not so?"

"I-it is the young minister of Banburg that I have dared to love, John, but I sent him away unknowing. My love is too great to link his name with scandal." I did not wait to hear more-I was unning toward Paul's study. I found him there, his head bowed in his arms. "Paul," I cried, incoherently at first, she does love you-little Margaret Holt; she is out by the hedge. Go quick, brother, and bring her in to supper. Between us we will coax her to stay here-forever."

TO MAR ST. MICHEL'S BEAUTY

Silting Up of the Bay la Causing Much Anxiety to the People of Normandy.

The steady silting up of the Bay of St. Michel is a cause of much anxlety to the good people of Normandy. It threatens to spoil the beauty of the famous Mont St. Michel's, which at present is linked to the mainland only by an artificial causeway. Formerly the Mont, which in the course of the centuries has been by turns a Druidical shrine, a Benedictine abbey, and a state prison, and which, since its restoration by Violet-le-Duc, is jealously preserved as an historical monument, was as inaccessible at high tide, except by boat, as its Cornish counterpart, St. Michael's Mount still is. But the causeway enabled a light railway to run to the very foot of the Mont, and this causeway is stated by experts to be one of the great causes of the silting up, which it is predicted, will eventually make the Mont just part of the ordinary coastline.

Ohio's Government

COL. CARMI THOMPSON

Is the Biggest Business Institution Within the Borders of the Buckeye State

To its care is committed interests vital to the welfare of every person within the state. If its affairs are well administered, they contribute to the happiness of every person; if they are ill-administered, cost and increased burdens are the lot of each person.

Carmi A. Thompson, Republican nominee for Governor, is one of the most capable administrators ever a candidate for governor of Ohio. He possesses the ability to a dequately handle the affairs of such a great and farreaching institution from the viewpoint of the highest welfare of Ohio and her citizens.

Few men have had such a wide experience in life. Beginning as a humble miner's son, he rose successively to an officer of his city, his state and his nation. In every position he won the confidence and esteem of those with whom and for whom he served. Absolute integrity, thorough comprehension of the problems involved, and "the well" to handle them with the utmost care and ability characterized every term of office.

As a private citizen he achieved marked success as a business man. Men trust him with their most intricate problems. He solves them, or ably helps in their solution.

This career, a training received in public and private walks of life, from the lowest walks to the highest, fit him more completely to be Governor of Ohlo from every viewpoint. IN THOMPSON'S LIFE THERE HAS NEVER BEEN THE WORD "FAILURE."

As Governor of Ohio he would administer the affairs of the State in such a way as to win the admiration of every citizen of the State.

National Problems are also to be solved

President Harding and his administration have solved more great problems in the past eighteen months than any other administration in the nation's history since that of George

Eighteen Months ago:

The nation faced a debt of 24 billion dollars-fully half of which, even non-particans admit-twas due to unparalleled waste and lack of "common sense" on the part of the Democratic national administration during the war.

The flood gates were open. Cheap labor and cheap goods were pouring in unchecked at every American port. The barrier of war swept away, every protection needed by American labor and American industry had been thrown down.

Five million men walked our streets unemployed, and the number increased daily. Factories were closing. Industrial paralysis was setting in such as had not been the case since the "free trade" times of 1893-94.

American farmers faced bankruptcy.

THE NATION STAGGERED UNDER ITS GIGANTIC LOAD.

Then Warren G. Harding became President and today:

Every man who wishes a job can get it. The Cleveland Press (Democratic) found 2,000 jobs seeking men in one hour two weeks ago.

American farmers are again able to market their products and American workingmen to buy those products. National expenditures have been reduced, almost two billions the first

Liberty bonds, worth 85 under the Democratic regime, are worth 100 or above. National credit has been restored to par. Interest rates have been reduced from 71/2 to 41/2 per cent-for the benefit of every citizen of the nation. American industry has been protected, the flood of cheap imports stopped, by enactment of a tariff law-the lowest tariff law ever enacted by a Republican administration, but adequate to preserve American standards and wages.

Three billions have been paid on the national debt. And a multitude of other gigantic problems-the heritage of the war and the most vast wastage in history-have been solved or are on their way to

Your vote for congressman Fess, already a national figure, for United States Senator, is a vote for added Ohio leadership in the United States Senate, and for a continuation of the program of solving national problems. This same is true of a vote for your Republican Congressman.

DO NOT FORGET THE SPEECH OF JAMES M .-COX, announcing the battle cry that Democracy is for the League of Nations. Do not forget his attack upon that gallant soldier, Judge Benson W. Hough, candidate for re-election to the Supreme Court.

REMEMBER to vote for the two splendid Republican nominees for the Supreme Court. Their names appear on the separate judicial ballot. Mark them this way:

Issued by Ohio Republican State Campaign Committee Wm. H. Miller, Chairman.

For United States Senator

A vote for the Republican candidates on November 7th is a vote of confidence in a capable administration of the affairs of Ohio and the Nation.

PRESIDENT HARDING AND HIS CABINET ARE CONSIDERING MANY SUGGESTIONS.

ACTION BY CONGRESS LIKELY

Abolishing of Railway Labor Board and Enactment of Legislation Like Canada's Industrial Disputes Investigation Law Proposed.

BY JAMES P. HORNADAY

Washington,-President Harding and members of his cabinet are giving careful consideration to many suggestions as to how the country may btain a larger measure of freedom from labor troubles. It is the present intention of the President, it is well understood, to discuss some of the more pertinent of these suggestions in his address to congress in There is apparently a general demand throughout the country that congress shall write into the law of the land some new plan for settling disputes between capital and labor. It is a question whether much can be done with the subject at the short session which will begin in December and end on March 4. In some quarters there is already talk of an extra session next spring, which would be devoted entirely to the subject of industrial peace.

There is a somewhat insistent demand that the administration shall favor legislation providing for compulsory arbitration, but it is reasonably certain that the administration will not lend its indorsement to such a program. Even if the executive de partment should advocate compulsory arbitration, it is a question, it is as serted, whether congress could be per suaded to follow the leadership of the President. As the situation presents itself at this time, two outstanding proposals are being considered.

1. The repeal of the provisions of the transportation act of 1920, under which the railroad labor board was created.

2. The enactment of legislation providing for some such plan as is in operation in Canada—the enactment of an industrial disputes investigation

Stands by the Labor Board.

Thus far the Harding administration has not indicated that it has lost faith in the railroad labor board. To the contrary, the President has said publicly on several occasions during the last two months that he felt that the board had justified its existence. Supporters of the railroad labor board not only would not like it abolished. but would like to see its powers broadened and see it removed to Washingtion and set down alongside the interstate commerce commission. It is certain, however, that the board will be a real issue before congress when that body proceeds to the consideration of legislation relating to industrial disputes.

When the transportation legislation was before congress early in 1920, many good things were said about the 'anadian plan for settling labor troubles, but the organized workingmen in the United States were not ready at that time to accept the Canadian law, and so congress dropped that plan and set up the railroad labor board. The situation has undergone a change. Organized workingmen in the United States, and particularly organized railroad employees, are now very generally inclined to look with favor on the Canadian plan, so it is asserted.

Canadian Law Liked.

One of the arguments now being put forth in support of Canada's law s that the shopmen employed in Canada by international railroads-railroads that have part of their mileage in the United States and part in Canada-did not strike when their union brethren in the United States quit work. The international rail roads of Canada reduced the wages of their shopmen, but instead of striking the shopmen applied for boards of inquiry and conciliation under the industrial disputes act. This machinery has thus far prevented any walkouts on the Canadian railroads. Under the Canadian law a board is appointed for each individual dispute It consists of three members, one named by the employees directly con cerned, one by the company, and the third, if these two shall fail to agree, by the government. The awards of these boards are not compulsory. After the award under the Canadian law has been made, either side may refuse to accept it. But it is asserted that the law has maintained industrial Peace throughout Canada since it was enacted; and the law has of course had its trial through the after-the-war reconstruction period—a period that has produced many labor troubles in Canada and elsewhere.

It is certain that when congress conenes, either in special session in Novender or in regular session in December, there will be a flood of bills proposing ways for settling strikes. he administration is obviously ambith as to have a program of its owna program that will appeal to the country and to congress. It is with this in mind that the President is taking counsel from week to week with men whose advice is worth listen-

Baking Powderthat's the big thing in successful baking

It determines failure or suc cess in baking, more than any other ingredient. If you do not always have satisfactory bakings, change to Calumet for just one trial. It is pure: containing only such ingredients as have been officially approved by U. S. Food Authorities.

Within the Calumet factories - the largest and most sanitary on earth—hundreds of skilled workers clad in white are busily engaged in producing the baking powder that is used by millions. Human hands never touch it. Its sale is $2\frac{1}{2}$ times as much as that of any other brand. Pure in the making—pure in the baking.

A pound can of Calumet contains full 16 ounces. Some baking powders come in 12 ounce instead of 10 ounce cans. Be sure you get a pound when you want it.
